

Explosion-proof distribution box with forward and reverse rotation

AI Overview

Explosion-proof distribution boxes for forward and reverse motor control are available in modular, stainless steel enclosures with ATEX/IECEx certification, designed for hazardous environments. Key Features Material and Construction: These boxes are typically made from 304 or 316L stainless steel or Q235 steel, providing corrosion resistance and durability in harsh environments. They feature flameproof enclosures (Ex d) that prevent sparks or flames from escaping, ensuring safety in explosive atmospheres. Certifications: Most models comply with ATEX and IECEx standards, suitable for Zone 1 and Zone 2 hazardous areas. They are rated for gas groups IIC and dust groups IIIC, with temperature classes ranging from T6 to T4 depending on the model. Operational Capabilities: These distribution boxes can be equipped with forward and reverse rotation motor starters, allowing bidirectional control of motors. Internal wiring is pre-configured, and external connections are simplified through cable glands and operating handles on the panel. Modular Design: Many boxes, such as the HRMD96 and CZ1290 series, offer modular installation, enabling combination of multiple units to save space and meet complex distribution requirements. Hinged doors with specialized structures protect flameproof joints during opening and closing, extending service life. Applications: These boxes are widely used in petrochemical plants, food processing, medical machinery, aerospace, and military ships, where explosion-proof safety is critical. They support both control and distribution functions, including motor starting, terminal connections, and switch operations. Customization: Manufacturers often provide custom solutions to meet specific client requirements, including additional control components, windowed panels for easy operation, and pre-wired internal circuits.
